

Attached is a photo of Heart Rock dug out of our vegetable garden by John Hruska. The photo is by RM Aurelian.

This picture reminds me of the old Chinese story of the exchange between Buddhist teacher and student:

The student asks:

"In my garden there is a stone that sits up and lies down. (He means himself) Can I carve it into a Buddha?"

The Teacher replies:

"Yes, you, most certainly, can carve it into a Buddha!"

The student responds:

"But, I'm not sure I can carve it into a Buddha."

The Teacher replies:

"Then, you can't!"
